I know you can't bring guns to DC, but is it legal to bring a guillotine? Just asking "theoretically".

Constitution says that your right to Keep and BEAR Arms Shall Not Be Infringed. The way to stand up against the stripping of your rights is NOT to kowtow to an illegal false-law which the 1803 decision of Marbury v Madison has ALREADY DECLARED is null and void.

Nobody is required to bring their gun to DC, but every single person who decides "Golly, I can't bring my gun to DC, they told me not to!" is actually saying "Okay, I'll give you SOME ground, but not ALL the ground!" And when you do that, you eventually run out of fucking ground.

You are bringing your full-scale working model of your idea for a cabbage slicer to the US Patent Office.

^^^ This. It's just a mostly-peaceful cabbage slicer, officer.

Make sure you download and print and fill out a US Patent Application, just to be safe 🤔🤔🤔🤔

▼ Building a guillotine or Hanging Platform in front of Congress would definitely send a message. NEEDS TO BE DONE

▼ Don't call it a hanging platform, just a real real tall soap box or speakers platform. Any politician can get up there and talk, IF THEY DARE.

▼ You assume you cannot why? It is a Federal piece of land and not a State. We own it. We the people control it. Why do think they tried to create that Law? No guns in DC? Because they think Patriots will just say, oh well. Cannot go to DC armed and have a peaceful protest? OK let's do not go. Why not? Only Traitors wish for Patriots not to show up peacefully with arms. But this is all academic as you know. How can they stop Millions of Patriots from coming armed and peacefully protesting? That would be a neat trick. Eating Popcorn Emoticon

3 I asked about a Spear- also no :(anything that counts as a weapon apparently not allowed.

Edit: what kinda f crazy leftist downvotes a spear?? Shame on whomever you are!!

▲ AetherSurreal 1 months ago +12 / -0

12 I downvoted you not for the spear, but because you don't have the balls to bring a gun and defy them.

They stole your fucking election and you're going to respect their anti weapon rules? You deserve to be ruled, cuck.

Bring a gun. Bring ten. They can't stop us all.

3 I'm too new of a gun owner, I am NOT going to freaking bring a gun into DC without 100% being comfortable with what i'm shooting. If it's not a natural extension of my arm yet it's staying home.

1 Good call, Pedo. Don't listen to anyone who tells you otherwise.

I built an AR Pistol a few months back. I know how the AR platform works; however, my frankenstein build does not work the way I want or expect it to.

Still slowly working out the bugs, so I'd never introduce that specific weapon into a massive crowd.

100% or not at all....

spez: there's always that one dumbfuck....

2 Exactly ! If I might be a hindrance to everyone else fighting, not a help, due to my inexperience then I'm not going to bring a firearm. I'll still fight every other way I possibly can, but not risking anyone's lives with a firearm I don't know very well yet. I'm mildly amused people are downvoting me wanting to be safe, but I'll happily take those downvotes.

Also that sounds awesome ! Did you build from a kit?

I'm carrying a flag instead; if i wasnt i'd maybe go that route though! I was hoping originally to do a combination of a spear and a flagpole

Bring your guns.

IMHO It's unconstitutional to make DC a gun free zone given the need to apply the 2A against tyranny from time to time. That's where a lot of those roaches are, and we're entering the "it needs to happen now or not at all" phase.

▼ The courts have absolutely failed us, with tons of obvious voter fraud evidence everywhere.
At this point, the POWER that WE gave the courts to fairly judicate matters must now be taken completely back.

WE are the force behind the law, and we must make sure everyone knows that.

Roberts of the Supreme Court was afraid of some little BLM protesters? If that's the case he should absolutely fear us, and our POWER.
